Slave Lake burns, thousands flee

◗ Mandatory evacuation proceeding 'as smoothly as it can go': Mountie ◗ Equipment, roughly 200 firefighters from B.C., Ontario expected to arrive by tomorrow to help Alberta with its fires

Thousands of people were fleeing their homes yesterday evening as strong winds fanned an out-of-control wildfire into a northern Alberta town where hundreds of buildings were destroyed.

The Town of Slave Lake advised the community of about 7,000 people to protect themselves from the wildfire by heading for parking lots, beaches or large, green open spaces.

A general evacuation was underway.

"The town is on fire. Apparently there have been a lot of homes that have burned down," said RCMP spokeswoman Doris Stapleton.

"There's been no loss of life. There's been no injuries we're aware of," she added.

Authorities warned residents against fleeing on the highways since they were closed.

Stapleton said the RCMP have called in all available resources to assist in getting people out.

Spill cleanup halted

- A wildfire near Peace River forced cleanup operations at the site of a huge oil pipeline spill last month to be suspended.
- Plains Midstream Canada, the pipeline operator, said the decision to remove its staff was made after county officials issued an evacuation order yesterday morning.

Staff Sgt. Mike Proctor of Slave Lake RCMP said later "probably 30 per cent of the structures" had been destroyed by the fire.

He said when the fire hit the town, it was nine square kilometres in size.

Although Proctor said two roads leading out of Slave Lake were closed, residents can get out through the road leading to Athabasca.

Local radio station 92.7 Lake FM reported on its website that its studio in Slave Lake, as well as the city hall and hundreds of buildings, had been lost to the flames.

Duncan MacDonnell, a spokesperson for Alberta Sustainable Resource Development, said firefighting aircraft cannot fly over Slave Lake because there are wind gusts of up to 100 km/h and the smoke is too thick.

"The weather conditions there are freakish — the perfect conditions for a firestorm," MacDonnell said.

Getting out of town yesterday evening wasn't easy, according to one Slave Lake resident, who said the lineup of vehicles was long.

"It's crazy," said Scott, who didn't want his last name used. "We've seen a whole lot of vehicles go to the west and then get redirected back to the east."

Mayor pushes for airport bus

Calgary could have a fast track from the downtown core to the airport if Mayor Naheed Nenshi succeeds in funding an express bus at today's council meeting.

Nenshi is proposing council spend $336,000 from its Innovation Fund for a pilot project that would see direct service from downtown to the airport for six months.

"This is suggesting that we try an experiment from now until the end of the year to see if there is demand for a public-transit option," he said.

Though a bus route from the northeast end of the LRT line to the airport was added in March, Nenshi said that serves employees of the airport more so than travellers.

Nenshi said with negotiations to build a tunnel under the new airport runway still not complete, the possibility of an LRT line to YYC is still up in the air.

"Given the difficult ... situation around the airport at this time, this is a good opportunity to start creating opportunities for people other than just driving," said Nenshi. The goal is to begin service on July 1, 2011. Calgary Transit estimates a daily ridership of 1,100 passengers.

Crisis unites neighbourhood

Three-alarm blaze destroys three homes and damages at least two others ◐ Six engine crews dispatched to scene ◐ Cause not yet known

Heroic actions and community spirit shone through amid the scramble for safety as fire broke out on Citadel Acres Way yesterday.

James Martsch watched as fire crews pulled his neighbour from her fully engulfed home. The woman, whom he identified as Tammy, was screaming that her dog Jake was still inside.

Fuelled by emotion, Martsch grabbed a shovel and raced to the house. He and some fellow neighbours broke open a window and peered inside.

"Black soot came out and smothered our faces ... the heat was so intense," he said. "I was just about to back away, but that's when he (Jake) came out.

"I didn't think he was going to make it. I thought it was over."

Elsewhere, neighbours were offering shelter for residents like Shirley and Barrie Stephen as crews continued to battle a fire that had broke out on the roof of their home.

"It's terrifying," Shirley said. "It all happened so fast."

Even the youngsters of Citadel were doing their part. Up a block from the blaze, a group of alert children spotted a small fire breaking out in front of a home. They alerted crews and it was quickly doused.

Fierce fight

1. Roughly 40 firefighters battled the Citadel blaze for much of the afternoon, said Battalion Chief Ernie Molineaux.
2. Molineaux said formal accommodation was being arranged for families unable to return to their homes.

Residents fed up with noise from rail yard

▶ Morgan Gladu and Peter von Sass said they used to find the sound of the rail yard soothing, but blasts from loud horns at all hours of the day and night are "jarring."

Inglewood residents are hoping their alderman is able to mitigate ongoing noise at a nearby rail yard that they say is destroying their quality of life.

After moving into a home just across the street from the Canadian Pacific Railway's Alyth Yard three years ago, Peter von Sass and Morgan Gladu said they expected some noise.

"We get that we're neighbours to a train yard, but there should be some happy balance between the residential community and the corporate community in some way," said Gladu.

Ald. Gian-Carlo Carra said the corporation has made some short-term changes, but he wants a long-term plan put in place.

"Basically, it's gone from an active but not crazy-busy yard to a major servicing centre for locomotives," he said. "The scary thing, of course, is the city really has no jurisdiction over the CP Rail at all."

Jen Bysterveld has lived in the area for 11 years and said she won't be forced out of her home.

"Essentially, it's just destroyed any quality of life," she said. "It's really the only thing we have to hang on to at this point — that the study will come up with some solutions."

Carra will be bringing forward a notice of motion at today's council meeting, asking for city administration to work with CP Rail to develop a strategy.

Spills raise safety questions

It's been a rough couple of weeks for crude oil shippers and it's not helping their plans to build new, multibillion-dollar pipelines.

Some 4.5-million litres of crude gushed from Plains Midstream Canada's Rainbow pipeline in Northern Alberta on April 29. And last week, much smaller quantities of oil have spilled from a TransCanada Corp. line in North Dakota and an Enbridge Inc. line in the Northwest Territories.

The spate of spills has weighed on an already fierce debate over whether two controversial oil pipelines can be built safely: TransCanada's Keystone XL pipeline to the U.S. Gulf Coast and Enbridge's Northern Gateway pipeline to Canada's West Coast.

The U.S. State Department is in the midst of reviewing TransCanada's $13-billion Keystone XL proposal, which would extend a Midwest-bound line to Texas refineries and nearly double its capacity.

On May 7, 79,500 litres of crude spilled in North Dakota from a pump station along the base Keystone system, which TransCanada brought into service last summer.

Parents address concussions in amateur sport

Members of Calgary's sports communities gathered yesterday to discuss the impact of concussions in amateur sport during the Head On convention.

The event, organized by the Calgary Bulldogs Football Association, brought together local experts, as well as a former professional athlete.

Former WWE wrestler and co-founder of the Sports Legacy Institute, Chris Nowinski was the keynote speaker at the event and said concussions greatly impacted his life.

"After playing football at Harvard, I was a pro wrestler with the WWE and I had to retire at 24 because I developed five years of post-concussion problems," he said. "The evidence is growing that we've been damaging our children's brains by not paying attention to the effects of trauma. Dominique Strauss-Kahn's nickname was "the great seducer." Not even an affair with a subordinate could knock the International Monetary Fund leader off a political path headed for the French presidency.

All that changed with charges he sexually assaulted a maid in his hotel room, a case that generated shock and revulsion, especially in his home country.

The 32-year-old maid told authorities when she entered his suite Saturday afternoon, she thought it was unoccupied. Instead, Strauss-Kahn emerged from the bathroom naked, chased her down a hallway and pulled her into a room, where he forced her to perform oral sex on him and tried to remove her underwear authorities said.

"He denies all the charges against him," said Benjamin Brafman, his lawyer.

Unless the charges are dropped, they could destroy his chances in a presidential race that is just starting to heat up.

U.S. Senator John Kerry reiterates scope of recent events, their effect
Says finger pointing counterproductive, positivity needed to move forward

U.S. Senator John Kerry warned yesterday that already shaky U.S.-Pakistani relations have reached a critical juncture as calls grow in the United States to cut some of the billions of dollars in aid to Islamabad following al-Qaida leader Osama bin Laden's killing.

Kerry, who spoke in Afghanistan before travelling to Pakistan, said sober and serious discussion was needed to resolve the widening rift amid growing suspicion that Pakistan's security forces were complicit in harbouring the al-Qaida leader, who was killed May 2 in a raid by U.S. Navy SEALs near Islamabad.

"We need to find a way to march forward if it is possible. If it is not possible, there are a set of downside consequences that can be profound."
U.S. SENATOR JOHN KERRY

For its part, Pakistan is angry that it was not told about the raid in Abbottabad until after it was completed, saying its sovereignty was violated.

"We want to be hopeful and optimistic that we can work our way through this," he said.

But he made clear that patience was running thin in Washington after it was discovered that the terror leader had been living for years in a compound in a military garrison town that includes Pakistan's equivalent of West Point.

Unrest on all fronts

Protesters storm Israeli borders in deadly clashes Israel points finger at Syria as orchestrater

Mobilized by calls on Facebook, thousands of Arab protesters marched on Israel's borders with Syria, Lebanon and Gaza yesterday in an unprecedented wave of demonstrations, sparking clashes that left at least 15 people dead in an annual Palestinian mourning ritual marking the anniversary of Israel's birth.

In a surprising turn of events, hundreds of Palestinians and supporters poured across the Syrian frontier and staged riots, drawing Israeli accusations that Damascus, and its ally Iran, orchestrated the unrest to shift attention from an uprising back home. It was a rare incursion from the usually tightly controlled Syrian side and could upset the delicate balance between the two longtime foes.

Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu, who heads to Washington at the end of the week, said he ordered the military to act with "maximum restraint" but vowed a tough response to further provocations.

"Nobody should be mistaken. We are determined to defend our borders and sovereignty," he declared in a brief address broadcast live on Israeli TV stations.

Sony began restoring its PlayStation Network service yesterday after shutting it down almost a month ago because of a massive security breach that affected more than 100 million online accounts.

Restored operations are limited mainly to online gaming, chat and music streaming services. Sony said it aimed to fully restore the PlayStation Network by the end of the month.

Sony also began a phased restoration of its Qriocity movie and music services, which share the PlayStation Network's server.

Kazuo Hirai, chief of Sony's PlayStation video game unit, said the company has enhanced security measures to protect customers' personal data, and added that Sony had not received any reports of the stolen information being used illegally.

No more oil until war over: Libyan producer

Libya's largest petroleum company will not produce oil until the war ends, and that probably holds good for producers across the country, a spokesman said yesterday.

Abdeljalil Mohamed Mayuf, information director of Arab Gulf Oil Co. — responsible for more than one-quarter of Libya's former production of 1.6 million barrels a day — said the company feared further attacks by ruler Moammar Gadhafi's forces.

The decision came after rocket attacks on April 4 badly damaged a pumping station and production facilities at southeast Messla. A pumping station on the pipeline to Tobruk port also came under attack.

"We cannot put an army around each field," Mayuf said, adding that resuming production "depends on this military operation and when Gadhafi leaves."

Libya's three-month revolt against Gadhafi has caused oil prices to soar.

Macau gambles on diversifying economy

The Galaxy Macau, a multi-billion-dollar casino resort complex, opened yesterday as Macau seeks to draw a broader mix of visitors than the high-rolling mainland Chinese who have helped the city become the world's most lucrative gambling market.

The launch of Macau's 34th casino comes as the city seeks to diversify its economy away from gambling after years of soaring growth that helped it overtake Las Vegas as the world's top casino market.

Macau's economy has boomed since a four-decade casino monopoly was broken in 2002, opening the way for U.S. and Australian operators to enter the market with local partners. Monthly casino revenues so far in 2011 have grown by at least 33 per cent, after surging by more than half last year to $23.5 billion.

The former Portuguese colony, once considered seedy and corrupt, now aims to develop cultural attractions that can draw more middle-class families who will stay longer.

LANGUAGES: THE MORE THE MERRIER

URBAN COMPASS

JANICE PASKEY
METRO CALGARY

Every parent wants their children to have an edge. So I'm feeling smug.

My bilingual kids are now going to have an advantage over public school kids. The Calgary Board of Education has decided to make French optional. This decision strikes me as sad.

Let's take the decision at face value. The CBE wants to save money. It's easier not to figure out French language curriculum, and who is going to teach it. It costs money — like everything that matters.

The benefits of multilingualism are well-documented — it makes kids smarter. Think of all the savvy kids who translate for their immigrant parents. Or who are just more intellectually curious about language and culture. Or who get jobs because of language.

"The benefits of multilingualism are well-documented — it makes kids smarter. Think of all the savvy kids who translate for their immigrant parents. Or who are just more intellectually curious about language and culture. Or who get jobs because of language."

Look at our own prime minister. I talked with a francophone Calgarian who is no fan of Stephen Harper's ideology, but sure admires his language skills. "It's amazing really," said my friend. "He speaks French very well, his pronunciation is very good." Harper no doubt has private tutoring, but shouldn't the average Calgarian kid aspiring to top office, or the Supreme Court, or any role on the national stage, have the same advantage?

There are arguments for Mandarin or Arabic instruction since a lot of the world's population speaks these languages — but I would argue to be a citizen in this country, English and French need to come first if we are prioritizing.

I think the optional French decision is another bad move for the CBE.

The public system has a lot of competition. On my street there are nine boys; not one went to the designated CBE school for elementary. They walked further for gifted programs, private, charter or francophone schools. With so much choice why would you pick a school without instruction in one of the country's official languages? Some might because they value proximity, or they have no choice. But should those kids suffer?

Maybe I'm idealistic but I think of public education as the great equalizer. Kids finish at 3:20 p.m., and are off about every second Friday. Can there not be French language instruction on those days by teacher's aides, volunteers or part-time teachers?

It's time for Alberta's minister of education to step in. What should an Alberta child know at the end of each grade? Basic French needs to be in the mix.

Worth mentioning

MONTREAL. Didn't get around to dusting this weekend? Don't worry. It turns out dust might actually hold some benefits for you.

The perennial household nuisance actually purifies the air by neutralizing ozone that can harm our lungs.

Dust can do this because one of its major components is human skin — which contains the ozone-eliminating component squalene.

Humans constantly shed their skin, losing up to 500 million cells per day. At that rate, according to Charles Weschler, who helped author a study whose results were announced last week by the American Chemical Society, it would take a person two to four weeks to turn over all of the skin cells on their body.

It's these skin flakes that clean the air. Their squalene helps neutralize ozone.

Most people might think of ozone as a good thing — and it is, when it's up high in the atmosphere and protecting us from ultraviolet radiation. But when it's down here, closer to us in the air that we breathe, it's a pollutant.

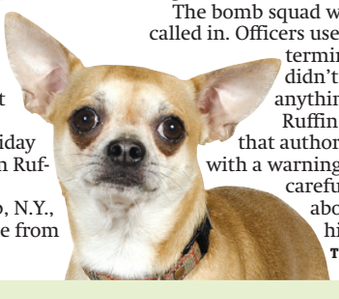
WEIRD NEWS

When you gotta go, you gotta go

A dog that wasn't quite housebroken may have indirectly been responsible for a bomb scare at a New York courthouse.

The trouble began Friday when 19-year-old Melvin Ruffin arrived at a court complex in Central Islip, N.Y., following a long bus ride from his home in Bellport.



During the trip, another passenger's chihuahua urinated on his backpack.

So he stashed the wet bag in some bushes while he went inside to answer a disorderly conduct citation.

But a retired police officer saw the bag and alerted security.

The bomb squad was ultimately called in. Officers used a robot to determine the bag didn't contain anything harmful.

Ruffin tells Newsday that authorities let him off with a warning to be more careful next time about where he left his stuff.

Is Okkervil primed for the mainstream?

Despite positive press, band's singer-songwriter is not sure commercial breakthrough lies ahead

Okkervil River has made its name on literate, orchestral indie-rock, a creative concoction that has proven to be extremely successful for other bands over the past year.

However, as they've watched their peers skyrocket to the top of the charts, the cerebral Texas outfit has yet to find a large audience, and the band's singer-songwriter Will Sheff says he's not necessarily expecting a commercial breakthrough with the group's newly released sixth record, I Am Very Far.

"This is something people say all the time," Sheff, 34, said in a telephone interview. "As we went through our almost 15 years of being a band, we would watch bands like the Decemberists and the Arcade Fire kind of be this tiny little band ... that would suddenly be five billion times bigger than us months later.

"At first, it was really frustrating because we felt like we had been doing our thing that we do for a really, really long time. And what got frustrating was people who hadn't heard of us (who) thought we were influenced by these bands that had half the lifespan of us or whatever.

HANDOUT

▶ Okkervil River's frontman Will Sheff, centre, produced the band's new album I Am Very Far himself. "I am incredibly proud of this record," he said. "I think it's our best one."

"But at the same time, I never really wanted to be a mega-huge stadium rock star. I've really realized that the amount of constraint that you have to be under when you're trying to be successful, it's frustrating. You really have to stress about the perception of every last little thing you do. ... I didn't get into the music business to feel career pressure.

"I (like) the manoeuvrability that we have, where I basically get to do whatever ... I want, and if I want to make a record (of) throat singing and nobody buys it, I don't have to feel bad."

The 11 tracks on I Am Very Far achieve a grandiosity that was the result of ambitious studio sessions that occasionally featured two guitarists, two pianists, two drummers and seven guitarists playing simultaneously.

And yet, for all Sheff's hard-earned sovereignty, plenty of observers seem to think I Am Very Far might propel his band to new commercial heights anyway. The Guardian's four-star review asserted that Sheff and co. "seem intent on following the Arcade Fire route to mass accessibility," while the BBC called the band "Wilco waiting to happen" — before arguing that I Am Very Far would signal the band's arrival.

Sheff admits to having absorbed some of that positive press, and doesn't deny the subsequent relief that washed over him.

"It makes me really happy," he said. "When I was making this record, I was really aware that ... if you really loved (the band's previous albums) The Stage Names and The Stand Ins, that you might not like this record or it might not give you the exact same thing that you wanted.

"And I was aware that might make certain people disgruntled or something like that, so it was nice to see that people were responding to the record."

Big shoes (and shirts) to fill for Kutcher

There's a new man on the scene at Two and a Half Men. But is Ashton Kutcher man enough?

With Friday's announcement that Kutcher will be replacing Charlie Sheen, viewers could begin to wonder how he will be plugged into the hit sitcom's tight little world.

Can his particular appeal fill the void of the caustically droll Sheen? And just who the heck will his character be?

Neither CBS nor Chuck Lorre, the series' creator, were giving any hints as they confirmed the deal to bring Kutcher into a show where Sheen's character was the comic centre, portraying an advertising jingle writer with a playboy lifestyle and an overwrought brother. Kutcher, who first found sitcom stardom more than a decade ago on That '70s Show, specializes in puppy dog wholesomeness and laid-back, goofy sexiness. He's perhaps the anti-Sheen.

"We are so lucky to have someone as talented, joyful and just plain remarkable as Ashton joining our family," said Lorre, also the show's executive producer.

"If I was any happier, it'd be illegal."

"I can't replace Charlie Sheen," said Kutcher, adding that he plans to work hard "to entertain the hell out of people."

Thor nailed down the No. 1 spot at the box office again. Paramount's 3-D superhero film starring Chris Hemsworth as Marvel's hammer-toting god of thunder earned US$34.5 million in its second weekend, according to studio estimates yesterday. That brings the total haul of Thor to $119.2 million, though not quite as impressive as fellow comic book hero Iron Man 2, which earned $211.2 million by its second weekend the same time last year. Universal's Bridesmaids, the raunchy comedy starring Kristen Wiig as a down-on-her-luck maid of honour, debuted above expectations in second place with $24.4 million.

Getting behind the camera

Actress Famke Janssen makes her writing and directorial debut with the immigrant tale Bringing Up Bobby Getting downsized out of screen roles is inevitable for most actors — and particularly actresses — as they get into their 40s and beyond. With her writing-directing debut, Famke Janssen is taking the do-it-yourself route to ensuring she still has a film career.

Janssen's mother-son comic drama Bringing Up Bobby, starring Milla Jovovich, is playing in the huge movie market that accompanies the Cannes Film Festival, where the filmmaker hopes to find distributors to put it into theatres in the United States and elsewhere.

The 46-year-old Janssen aims for a career balance of acting and directing.

"I'm hoping that I can juggle both for a little bit, at least," Janssen said in an interview. "The older you get as a woman, the less parts you'll have just by nature. And then I really don't want to go down the whole plastic surgery route and become obsessed with the way I look, which is very much a part of being an actress, sadly.

Janssen, who played telepath Jean Grey in the X-Men franchise and a James Bond villain who crushes victims with her legs in GoldenEye, took a couple of years off from big-screen acting to raise money to get her own film off the ground.

Bringing Up Bobby stars Jovovich as Ukrainian con artist Olive, a brash, boisterous woman raising her young son in Oklahoma through a variety of schemes and grifts. Bobby (Spencer List) adores his mom, but Olive is forced to decide if he might have a better future in the custody of a grieving couple (Bill Pullman and Marcia Cross) who take an interest in the boy.

▶ Actress Famke Janssen poses for a portrait as she promotes the film Bringing Up Bobby at the 64th international film festival in Cannes, southern France.

Janssen wrote the screenplay based on a story idea she and her boyfriend, Cole Frates, came up with. A native of the Netherlands who moved to New York City to work as a model in her late teens, Janssen said she was inspired by her own experiences as an immigrant observing America, particularly in heartland states such as Oklahoma, where Frates grew up.

"I just wanted to play around with the idea of what is it like to look from the outside into a country?" Janssen said.

No longer Gaga over her man

Luc Carl joined pop star on tour, but stress of the road and Gaga's busy schedule were too much for the couple

After almost a year of dating, Lady Gaga and boyfriend Luc Carl have called it quits, she discloses to Graham Norton.

"No, I don't have a boyfriend and haven't been on any dates recently," the singer says during an interview on his BBC talk show.

Though Carl had been accompanying her on her recent tour, the stress of the road and Gaga's hectic schedule reportedly became too much.

But keeping busy is normal for the pop star: "At a certain point exhaustion becomes a state of being, and mentally I have to be strong and overcome it. It's like a cloud, a fog really, that hovers over me," she recently told V magazine.

"But in a way I will never escape it, because in truth when I do have to time to rest I end up writing a song, or editing a film or creating a new project for the fans to be involved in."

Former Friends star Matthew Perry is planning a return trip to rehab, though it's more of a preemptive step than a result of a relapse, according to People magazine.

"Please enjoy making fun of me on the World Wide Web."

Perry has previously been to rehab twice, in 1997 and 2001, and has struggled with prescription medications and alcohol in the past.

▶ With emotions running high after graduation, there are just some things parents shouldn't say to their newest graduate.

10 things not to say to your recent graduate

After the caps and gowns have been hung up and diplomas have been framed, it's time for grads to find work ◐ As a parent you want to help, but some things are better left unsaid

The playing of Pomp and Circumstance is over. The mortar boards have been thrown in the air. And the diplomas are hung up on the wall.

Your son or daughter is now home and looking for work in his or her field during one of the toughest economic climates in decades. How bad is it, exactly? In the U.S. in 2010, college graduates had a 9.4 per cent jobless rate. Before the recession it was 5.5 per cent.

Many grads have moved back home, and this spring is sure to see another wave of boomerang kids moving out of the dorm for the last time and heading reluctantly back to their old bedrooms.

This is not necessarily because they want to, but because they can't pay rent elsewhere on their own.

As a parent you want to help. But what to say?

It's an emotional time, and nerves may be frayed. You certainly don't want to start doing their laundry again, but you also don't want to provoke a fight.

With that in mind, here are 10 things not to say to a recent college graduate.

1 "I'm sure we all need a break from stress, but you need a job before you know what real stress is."

2 "Since you are applying for jobs now, you might want to remove those beer pong pictures from your Facebook page."

3 "Some time in the military never hurt the old resumé."

4 "You may recall that we were not thrilled with your choice of a creative writing degree, but your contention that we promised to support you until you sell your first novel does reveal a truly creative mind."

5 "Remember that I plan to retire in six years, and it's important that you be paying your share of Social Security by then."

6 "I don't care what your roommate told you. Not Everyone has a trust fund."

7 "I'm sure Tiffany's surgery will help her job prospects, but we are not paying for a nose job."

8 "It's too bad you didn't find a nice (man/woman) in college, because you'll never again be around so many eligible people." (On the other hand, asking, 'You're still with him (her)?' might not go over well either.)

9 "We forgot to mention we've turned your old room into our scrapbooking centre. How do you feel about sleeping on the couch and putting your stuff in a storage unit?"

10 "I heard that they're hiring ... in China."

Many sea animals eat plastic, mistaking it for food

▶ Seabirds are increasingly being found with stomachs full of plastics.

Jan van Franeker spends his day examining the stomachs of dead seabirds. He doesn't see many small fish there. Instead he finds plastic — and in large amounts.

"Birds have an average of 0.3 grams of plastic inside their stomachs," van Franeker explains.

"That may not sound a lot, but if you translate that into human terms, it's like having a lunch box full of plastic inside your gut."

Franeker, a marine biologist at Holland's Institute for Marine Resources and Ecosystem Studies, specializes in the Northern fulmar, a seabird found in the North Atlantic.

The fulmars are not alone in eating plastic. Other birds, dolphins and seals encounter plastics in their feeding areas and mistake it for food.

Even whales have been discovered with stomachs full of plastic bags.

They've been munching plastic since the material began littering our oceans some 50 years ago. Even today, ships off the coasts of developed countries continue to dump their waste into oceans. Every year, 20,000 tons of waste is dumped in the North Sea alone.

Between 1999 and 2008, plastic rubbish in the world's oceans increased by 700 per cent.

QUEEN OF GREEN

LINDSAY COULTER

Sourcing a green product for a small purchase like a rug might not seem like a big deal, but we spend about 90 per cent of our time indoors.

Materials and chemical treatments that go into making many consumer products have an affect on our indoor air quality.

When it comes to floor coverings, kids are especially at risk because that's where they spend a lot of time. Choose carpets or rugs made from natural fibres like wool.

PFCs pollute our water, are persistent in the environment and can remain in the human body for years.

Avoid chemical treatments. Carpets, for example, are sometimes treated with formaldehyde, something Health Canada suggests you reduce or eliminate from home use as much as possible.

You probably don't realize that formaldehyde is also found in air fresheners, nail polish, bed sheets, kitchen cabinets, furniture — you get the idea.

As it emits fumes, most of the cancer research on formaldehyde focuses on risks from inhalation.

Avoid Stainmaster.

It's a perfluorochemical or PFC, widely-used as a water, grease and stain repellent in carpets and clothes. PFCs pollute our water, are persistent in the environment and can remain in the human body for years. You can also look for a Greenguard certified rug. The Greenguard Environmental Institute certifies products and materials that have low chemical emissions. There are 15 categories to choose from, such as building materials, furniture, and paint.

Student scientists shine in contest

▶ Marshall Zhang of Bayview Secondary School in Toronto.

The discovery of a drug cocktail that might have potential some day to help patients with cystic fibrosis (CF) took first place last Tuesday at a national science contest, and a method of making vegan sorbet was the runner-up.

The judges were left in awe at the level of science that participants brought to bear at a young age, said the chair of the judging panel, Dr. Luis Barreto, former vice-president of immunization and science policy at Sanofi Pasteur.

The students are driven by curiosity and "we know the future of Canada is in good hands as Canada looks into creating the R and D strategy for the country," he said in an interview after the awards were presented at the National Research Council Canada laboratories in Ottawa.

"The constant feeling with all the judges was I would hire these guys not as my summer student but as my post-doc ... every one of them. It was very difficult to actually identify the first five."

Marshall Zhang, a Grade 11 student in Richmond Hill, Ont., used the Canadian SCINET supercomputing network at the Hospital for Sick Children in Toronto to identify how two drugs interacted with a specific part of a mutant protein that's responsible for most cases of CF. THE CANADIAN PRESS

"Your boss may be getting a report each month about how many of their employees are on the Internet each day." SHIRIN KHAMISA, FOUNDER OF CAREERS BY DESIGN

DREW HINSHAW
LIFE@METRONEWS.CA

So you thought you could sneak in some Facebook time on the company dime? Woe unto thee.

Workers who reckon they can tweet on the clock are just cuckoo, career coaches warn. Spiteful higher-ups could be watching, and should you waste too much time scrolling through Twitter feeds you could find yourself checking into your apartment, searching for jobs.

"That's the number one thing people don't consider," says Sue Thompson, a work life coach. "Someone is watching you – and they have a right to."

"It all comes down to knowing your organizational culture," Shirin Khamisa, founder of Careers By Design, adds.

Many a manager, she notes, may take a laissez-tweet posture toward their employee's time. Others may expect you to keep a clean profile – and use it to relentlessly promote the company.

And still others, Thompson warns, may have your page history wiretapped and scrutinized as they prepare a case for your dismissal – dishonourably discharged for too much dilly-dallying.

"Your boss may be getting a report each month about how many of their employees are on the Internet each day," she cautions.

Breaking the Habit

There are no miracle come-down drugs for an Internet fix, Thompson says – "just discipline."

"Look, this is work, and you have to have the discipline to say to yourself, 'I will not check Twitter until I go to lunch and check it on my phone,'" she says.

But for companies that do permit Facebook in moderation, the harder task can be limiting the fraction of the workday you squander online.

We all need little midday breaks, Psychology Professor Tim Pychyl notes, and we take them constantly, whether consciously or not. "That's part of our nature," he says.

The trick, he offers, is to find novel ways of procrastinating: like taking a walk, or calling a friend.

"You acknowledge that break more by picking up the phone and dialing it," he explains. "You have to know what energizes you," Khamisa agrees, and it's likely not more screen time.

On satisfying your hunger for life

How taking a step back helped this BBQ maverick find a medium between work and what really matters

TURNING POINT

TERESA KRUZE
LIFE@METRONEWS.CA

Six years ago Ted Reader seemed to have it all. "The King of the Q" had built an empire around his name and smokin' personality, writing award-winning cookbooks, starring on television and touring North America.

But Ted was desperately unhappy. "I was on the phone, travelling, and working hard. I was carrying some weight and I was angry and bitter all the time." Reader took stock of his life and realized he had reached a turning point. He downsized his business, went back to his BBQ and started to cook.

▶ Ted Reader

Today he's a happy man, husband and the father of two young children. His cookbooks, sauces and spice rubs fly off the supermarket shelves.

"I'm living life and I'm having a good time at it. I want to share that with people. I'm working harder today than I ever have but I'm having fun."

This long weekend take two servings of family and friends; add a dash of inspiration and lots of laughter. Head to the BBQ and you'll be cooking up Ted Reader's recipe for success.

The perfect steak

Ted's tips:

- Buy the best quality meat you can afford.
- A two inch steak is perfect.
- Heat grill to 650+ degrees Fahrenheit.
- Sear one minute each side with the lid open.
- Put other burners on "high" and close the lid.
- 12 minutes for a rare steak
- Let them rest for five minutes for medium rare.
- Enjoy!

Impact lost in lectures: Experts

Education leaders meet at the University of B.C. to explore new ways of keeping students longing to learn

Physics instructors should get away from university lectures and instead engage students with an approach that involves clicker response questions, small group tasks and class discussion, says Nobel prize winner Carl Wieman.

And to do otherwise is "bad teaching," he says.

Wieman and colleagues at the University of British Columbia compared the standard lecture format for classes of 200-plus students with the experimental "deliberate practice" approach for a week on two large sections of an introductory undergraduate physics course.

Students in both groups covered the same material during Week 12 of the course and wrote identical tests, but there was better attendance, higher engagement and twice the learning in the section taught using the new approach.

"It's really what's going on in the students' minds much more than who's standing in front of them," Wieman said from Washington, D.C.

The lecture course was led by a highly rated charismatic faculty member, but the experimental course for the week was led by Louis Deslauriers, a trained but inexperienced postdoctoral student, assisted by Ellen Schelew – both co-authors of the study.

When asked if the approach should be used in high school and other university-level science classes, Wieman said the methods should be used everywhere.

"This is clearly more effective learning. Everybody should be doing it. It should be wholesale transformation," he said.

"You're practising bad teaching if you're not doing this. That's what the data says. It's high time everybody changed."

- Jason Harlow, a senior lecturer in the physics department at the University of Toronto, said many of the same suggestions brought forth by the study – including having students use $50 clickers to answer questions – have been done at U of T for a couple of years.
- The remote hand-held devices enable students to register their responses to questions posed by the instructor.
- "One thing we've noticed is whenever you change something it increases student engagement and even student learning during the initial stages of that change," he said.

Vancouver rallies to draw first blood

Pair of third-period goals gives Canucks comeback over Sharks

3	2
CANUCKS	SHARKS

Henrik Sedin and Kevin Bieksa scored goals 79 seconds apart in the third period as the Vancouver Canucks battled back to defeat the San Jose Sharks 3-2 last night in the opening game of the NHL's Western Conference final.

The quick goals pumped some energy into a game that had lacked excitement. Maxim Lapierre had the other Vancouver goal.

Joe Thornton, with a goal and an assist, and Patrick Marleau, on the power play, scored for San Jose. The Sharks led 2-1 after 40 minutes.

Game 2 will be in Vancouver on Wednesday. The best-of-seven series moves to San Jose for games Friday and Sunday.

Sedin put Vancouver ahead 3-2 on a power-play at 8:21 of the third after Dany Heatley was called for elbowing. The Canuck captain took a pass from defenceman Christian Ehrhoff and flipped a backhand past Sharks goaltender Antti Niemi for just his second goal of the playoffs.

Bieksa tied the game at 7:03. He took a pass from Alex Burrows and then launched a rocket past Niemi's stick side.

The game lacked the emotion and offensive fireworks the teams usually generate. It took Bieksa's goal before the towel-waving, sellout crowd of 18,860 made much noise.

Niemi had stymied the Canucks early. He held his ground during a wild scramble in the second. With bodies flying around him, Niemi flattened his left pad and stopped several whacks at the puck by Kesler and Jannik Hansen.

The Bulls are off to a good start in this series after sweeping the Heat during the regular season. They went on a 10-0 run midway through the third quarter, then pulled away in the fourth. Carlos Boozer added 14 points and nine rebounds. Joakim Noah had 14 rebounds and the Bulls pounded the Heat on the glass, 45-33.

▶ Jose Bautista, left, is congratulated by teammate Edwin Encarnacion yesterday after his two-run home run, his third homer of the game, in the sixth inning in Minnesota.

Bautista's bat hotter than ever

Jose Bautista hit three homers for the first time in his career yesterday, adding to his major league-leading total and sending the Toronto Blue Jays to an 11-3 victory over the Minnesota Twins and a sweep of their three-game series.

Jose Molina also had three hits for the Jays, who scored in each of the first four innings. Yunel Escobar and Aaron Hill each had a pair of hits for Toronto.

The victory extended Toronto's winning streak to a season-best five games and allowed the Blue Jays (20-20) to get back to the .500 mark for the first time in nearly a month.

Trevor Plouffe doubled and scored twice for Minnesota, which has lost eight straight and 14 of 17 as it heads out for a week-long West Coast road trip.

Bautista, who led the majors with 54 homers last year, continued his recent tear. The right-fielder is hitting .415 with 13 homers and 21 RBIs over the past 19 games, and his 16 home runs this season are just two behind the total of the entire Twins team.

16 Jose Bautista is currently ahead of his MLB home run leading pace from last year. He reached 16 homers May 30, 2010, and finished with 54 on the season.

	11	3
	JAYS	TWINS

After popping out to third base in the first inning, Bautista hit a solo home run to the second deck of left field off of Twins starter Brian Duensing in the third.

In the fourth, Bautista hit a line drive solo homer just inside the left field line off reliever Kevin Slowey.

In the sixth, his two-run homer to right-centre just cleared the 23-foot high wall and gave Toronto an 11-3 lead. Before hitting into a fielder's choice in the eighth, Bautista had homered four times in five plate appearances going back to Saturday.

Brandon Morrow (2-2) limited the Twins to three runs over five innings to pick up the victory.

Boogaard's brain donated to science

Minnesota hockey fans planned a memorial for Derek Boogaard last night to honour the former NHL tough guy who was found dead in his apartment last week, five months after a season-ending concussion that left his family wondering if his career as an enforcer had damaged his brain.

Boogaard's agent and a spokeswoman for the Boston University School of Medicine confirmed yesterday that the family of the 28-year-old forward agreed to donate his brain to researchers who will look for signs of a degenerative disease often found in athletes who sustain repeated hits to the head.

"It's an amazing thing he did and his family did. Hopefully, that'll bring some information," agent Ron Salcer told The Associated Press. "We don't know exactly the impact that the concussions might have played."

Boogaard, who missed the last half of last season with the New York Rangers due to a concussion, was found dead in his Minneapolis apartment Friday. Police said there were no outward signs of trauma; results of an autopsy are expected to take several weeks.

So far, the only indication that Boogaard's death might be related to concussions is the fact that his family signed papers to donate his brain to the BU Center for the Study of Traumatic Encephalopathy. The donation was first reported by the Star Tribune of Minneapolis.

Djokovic beats Nadal to lengthen 2011 streak

Novak Djokovic continued his recent mastery over top-ranked Rafael Nadal with a 6-4, 6-4 win in the Italian Open final yesterday that stretched the Serb's unbeaten start to the year to 37 matches.

The second-ranked Djokovic has beaten Nadal in all four finals they have played this year and defeated the Spaniard for the first time on clay in last week's Madrid Open final.

Djokovic is now the first player to beat Nadal on clay twice in the same year, a feat that comes exactly a week before the French Open starts.

"I definitely am amazed with my playing," Djokovic said. "But there's no time to enjoy it — I've got to get ready for Roland Garros."

Djokovic's edge over Nadal could enable him to overtake his rival for the No. 1 ranking the week after the French Open.

"He's doing amazing things. Every match he's very tough mentally and physically," Nadal said. "I'm doing everything I can. I can't ask myself anymore now. I'm doing very well but one player is doing better than me. I am waiting every week to try solutions, so let's see."

Djokovic's streak this year trails only John McEnroe's 42-0 start in 1984. Overall, Djokovic has won 39 consecutive matches stretching back to Serbia's Davis Cup triumph in December, sixth best in the Open era, seven behind Guillermo Vilas' record set in 1977. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Dear Tumbleweed,
I am a lucky guy to have you back in my life, and I hope you feel the same way. I love you and I cherish each and every moment we have together. Te estrano, Te amo!
FROM CARLOS JUNIOR

OMG! Matt you are cute, funny, adorable and soo much more! I hope that if you see this you won't get too creeped out!
THE DARK SIDE

What I said that night in Montreal was true. I was more asleep than awake and you weren't really supposed to hear it, but I meant it.
If things don't work now, maybe they will later. Either way, I'm so painfully happy to have gotten to know you like this.
